UPDATE

- The site is in current development after its long absence
- New pages include (all FREE!) - more home- schooling resources, (NEW) articles on psychology for the layman as I progress through my psychology degree, & therein, (NEW) 'SOOTHE' content for self-healing & self-soothing
- Art & crafts - including gallery & patterns, charts, how-tos
- Polite notice that all my writing is moved to www.FaithMcCord.com

HELLO & WELCOME!

For navigation of the site please refer to the 'contents' at the bottom of each page.fp

As a mature student I've been busy studying a psychology & counselling degree with the Open University, my 3rd term begins this autumn. My end goal with this is to help people heal themselves, whether from severe trauma or everyday stress. With self-healing in mind I began creating the 'Soothe' page with tips & info - all free for you. Another aim or hope is to soon get surgery to mend my damaged spine. I became physically disabled some years ago and suffer with chronic pain. Without this vital surgery I'm unable to properly stand or walk and I greatly miss my independence.

So, for now I have 'summer break' until uni starts again in October, and I intend to do more crafting especially with 3 x projects in mind - sculpture, sculpture incorporating a lamp, and sewing craft including stumpwork for the decoration of small wicker bags. I intend to sell a few of the completed sculpture lamps and embroidered wicker bags in my shop, The Little Log Cabin (www.TheLittleLogCabin.com).

Another goal for this summer is to publish two of my novellas for ebook; and later, to include other stories (www.FaithMcCord.com). I aim to work on the home-schooling resources and psychology articles after these projects are finished.

Although I am passionate about this website I will have to focus primarily on my own learning - health allowing.

I'm going to see if I can add a guest book in case you'd like to get in touch :)

All the best, thanks for dropping by and enjoy the summer!

Faith xo
